

Information referred to resolution 32/13 - The promotion, protection and enjoyment of human rights on the Internet.

Albania has not evidenced any legal or practical barriers that limit the women rights with regard to Internet access and the use of the Technology of Information and Communication.

The Technology of Information and Communication is a sector with a particular importance for the impact on social and economic development of the country. The liberalization of the electronic communications market, the increase on using the internet across the country, the extension of electronic services in the functions of government, and the offer of the electronic service delivery, are some significant achievements in the framework of the development of the Society of Information.

Also, the issues addressed in the Resolution 32/13 on the promotion, protection and enjoyment of human rights in Internet, are entirely reflected in the legal framework of the Technology of Information and Communication in Albania.

NOTE: The information makes reference to the contribution given by the Ministry for Public Administration and Innovation.