10. Several legal references can be found namely at:
   - Law on the educational system.
   - National Curriculum of Basic and Secondary Education.
   - Curriculum Guidelines for Preschool Education.
   - Document advisor on cross-curricular areas: Training Civic and Project Area.

12. Several National Plans, including educational dimensions for the Human Rights, have been defined and are in course:

The accomplishment of the National Plans and Strategy require the involvement of the schools and their teachers and students.

The referred National Plans were published, are being implemented and the ED Strategy is in a divulgence phase; it can be viewed at the following Internet addresses:

http://www.cig.gov.pt
http://www.ipad.mne.gov.pt

13. Education for the Human Rights in the curriculum is in the area of Citizenship Education, which is mandatory and transversal. At the elementary school level (6 to 15 years) there is a mandatory time scheduling for disciplines like Civic Education and Project Area which explicitly provides for the development of Human Rights Education.

There is also a mandatory training module for students of 10-11 years, referred as "Citizenship and Security," which begins with the theme of the human rights and approaching the security issues from a of Human Rights approach.
14. The Scheme of Assessment, Certification and Adoption of school textbooks, established by the Law 4/2006, 28th August, among the evaluation criteria refers that “assessment committees meet the constitutional values and principles, namely non-discrimination and gender equality.”
15. The legislation that defines the Regime of Autonomy, Administration and Management of education and teaching establishments (Law n°115 - A/98, 4th of May) states that its objective is “to accomplish democratization, equal opportunities and quality of public service” at schools life.
16. Human Rights Education was included in the scope of Citizenship Education, compulsory in initial teacher training and optional in-service training.

B. Learning environments
18. According to their own contexts, schools define the development of projects reflected at school Educational Projects and class projects. There are several projects, including Education for Peace, Intercultural Education, Education for Global Citizenship, Education for Gender Equality, Education for the Development, Inclusive Education.
20. Situations are diverse, according to schools and local organization contexts. It also depends on the value attributed to these areas by the schools. There are schools projects developed in cooperation with nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), municipal councils, parish councils, local associations and state agencies, namely the Portuguese Institute for Development Support (IPAD) and the High Commissioner for the Integration of Immigrants (ACIDI). There are also international projects supported by EU, UNESCO and Council of Europe.

C. Teaching and learning processes
23. For all the levels of education and teaching all of the different school curricula contain topics for the development of Education for Human Rights, consisting on the reference values for Citizenship Education, a cross-curriculum area. At elementary school there are also the Project Area and Civics Training. Students from 6 to 15 years have three hours weekly scheduled for these two areas.
24. A participatory methodology, in articulation with the reality of the school local environment, when possible, is recommended for the development of Citizenship, not only for pedagogical reasons, but because participation in real situations is one of the competencies to be developed.
25. The service that carries out tasks related to the curriculum under the Ministry of Education is the Bureau for Innovation and Curriculum Development (DGIDC).
26. The schools use different materials on for Human Rights Education, produced by teachers themselves often along with the students. They also use materials which can be found at school libraries. To overcome the lack of offerings by the publishers of educational and teaching materials in this area, the DGIDC has published, in collaboration with other entities, a collection of books on Education for Citizenship:
   - Managing Multicultural Curriculum
   - Road Map to Education for Citizenship
- Road Map to Environmental Education Policy
- Consumer Education
- Road Map on Education for Sustainability
- Guide Road Map to Education for Entrepreneurship Policy
- Road Map “Citizenship and Gender” (publication soon)

Besides this collection were also published in the field of health:
- Health Education - Nutrition Education in School Environment - A frame to an offer of healthy food - Food and Physical Activity
- Oral Health
- Prevention on the Psychoactive Substances Consumption
- Sexuality
- Sexual transmitted infections
- Violence in School Environment

D. Training of school personnel

27. Education for Citizenship, including for the Human Rights, is a compulsory curricular domain in the initial teacher training, and it is optional in the continuous training.

28. The initial training of teachers depends on the training plan of the higher education institution which offers it.

29. These criteria are considered implicitly through academic and vocational training, work experience and curriculum vitae.

Part 3: Challenges and general comments

31. The cooperation with NGOs, namely with International Amnesty, was promoted, as well as were encouraged experiences of school sharing projects and school works competitions in the Human Rights domain.

33. The divulgation of activities and projects of the schools contributed to the dissemination of the Programme.

35. The evaluation process requires the participation of several departments of the Ministry of Education, at central, regional and local levels, as well as the NGOs enrolled in the program.

36. The Minister of Education established a Working Group whose purpose is to establish clear targets for the different areas under the Education for Citizenship, namely the Human Rights.
